

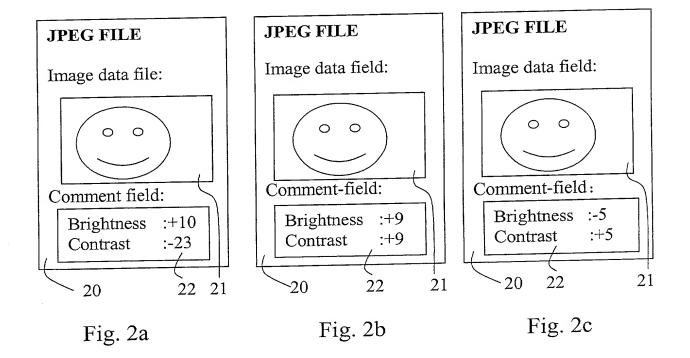

Fig. 1

¥

Create image data associated with an image and store the image data in a compressed form in a field of an image data unit

Store information associated with changes in the image in a separate field of the image data unit

Fetch the image data and information stored in the image data unit

Process the image data based on said information before displaying the image

Display the image based on the processed image data

Fig. 3

